SP Balasubrahmanyam is popular for his unique style of singing by adding his Ghazals or folk tunes to the popular Telugu film songs. He has successfully compared well with the other great singers. Influenced by the late Ghantasala, he started singing his own sweet songs which became popular in the mid 80's well before being recognized by critics. He was born in Mysore, Karnataka in 1955. He moved to India when he was 6 months old. He has lived in Chennai ever since, where he studied initially at Sastri Memorial School. After his schooling, he got admitted into the college in the same city. He then got into films where he initially sang for films before becoming a full-time singer of films. He has been a winner of many state level programs and received awards from State Government as well as from various institutions. He won the Filmfare Best Male Playback Award for 'Ranga Roju' in 1989. He has also contributed to social causes by singing a single for a social cause titled "Dukuna Parakka" which was about AIDS awareness and for "Doordarshan Teachers' Association" which was about Teacher's Day. He has also sung the national anthem of India in Telugu which is titled "Jana Gana Mana".
